

Thomas Allen,
Deputy Head of the Climate
Change Centre at Banque de
France, and advisor to the
Head of the NGFS Secretariat

Thomas Allen is Deputy Head of the Climate Change Centre at Banque de France and advisor to the Head of the NGFS Secretariat. Previously a Research economist, his recent work has focused on the development of climate scenarios for financial risk assessment.

Thomas has been assigned to the NGFS Secretariat (hosted at Banque de France) since 2019, where he was charge of the workstream of the NGFS dedicated to Macrofinancial issues. He supported the workstream Chair's team in developing the NGFS reference scenarios for the first phase of work. He also helped coordinate the Banque de France/ACPR's application of the NGFS scenarios for its pilot risk assessment exercise.

Prior to joining the Banque de France, Thomas worked for the OECD, Bioversity International (CGIAR) and the French National Institute for Agronomic, Food and Environmental Research (INRAE).
